

Fakten, Informationen, hilfreiche Artikel (kein "Chatthread", keine Mutmaßungen über ungelegte Eier)

Beitrag von „shells“ vom 1. Oktober 2020 20:18

Neue Studie, die die Rolle von Kindern im Infektionsgeschehen beleuchtet. Bislang unterschätzt, scheinen sie in Einzelfällen das Virus effektiv weitergeben zu können, vor allem innerhalb der eigenen Altersgruppe.

Zitat

The researchers found that children and young adults — who made up one-third of COVID cases — were especially key to transmitting the virus in the studied populations.

“Kids are very efficient transmitters in this setting, which is something that hasn’t been firmly established in previous studies,” Laxminarayan said. “We found that reported cases and deaths have been more concentrated in younger cohorts than we expected based on observations in higher-income countries.”

Children and young adults were much more likely to contract coronavirus from people their own age, the study found.

<https://www.princeton.edu/news/2020/09/3...spread-evidence>