

Boni für gute Lehrer - eine gute Lösung?

Beitrag von „undichbinweg“ vom 25. Januar 2022 18:27

Hier ist ein schöne Aussage aus einer Englischen Zeitung:

Q1. What makes an "incompetent" teacher?

Exam results? Ability to control the most disruptive? Parents' perception? Pupil's perception? The Head's perception? These often contradict each other...

Case A: Teacher gets outstanding exam results. Pupils hate teacher as teacher very strict. Parents complain that teacher gives out too many detentions which inconveniences them after school. Lesson observations show teacher is average. Incompetent?

Case B: Teacher does not get good exam results. Excellent lesson observations. Pupils love teacher. Pupils love the subject and want to study it further. Incompetent?

Case C: Teacher gets excellent results. Parents do not like "trendy" methods of teacher. Pupils enjoy the subject. Lesson observations are poor. Incompetent?

Case D: Teacher is expert in subject and gets excellent results for high ability classes. Since taking on lowest ability classes, can not control the disruptive, abusive, violent and apathetic pupils. Incompetent?