Good morning,

Foremostly my sincere apologize for having to write to you in English. I would appear to be very incoherent if I wrote in German unfortunately. I appreciate your understanding

Last year I applied through a recruiter for a lateral entry position in Sachsen-Anhalt. Since I possess a foreign bachelor's degree, I had to apply for the accreditation with the ZAB. The entire process took around 7 months. Now that it is here, I received an email from the Landesschulamt. Sachsen-Anhalt (Matorix Match) that I could qualify to teach

The following

1. Fach: Informatik bis Sekundarstufe II
2. Fach: Mathematik an Grundschulen

Neigungsfach: Mathematik an weiterführenden Schulen

Could someone shed some light on the above, does it mean I can teach two subjects or just one .

The situation now is as follows, I have to book an appointment for an online interview, where it would be decided how things would progress. I was hoping if any one from this forum could shed some light, or (an individual of NON-EU descent) has gone through the process.

1. How difficult is this job? I used to be corporate trainer (IT, Negotiations and Commercial contracts).
2. Are lateral entrants full time employees? Is there a pay scale to look at. (The recruiter does not want to discuss this). I do not live in Germany currently, and I need to make an educated decision for which I seek your assistance and am grateful for any advice you can solicit.
3. How many hours is a full work week? Standard 8 hours a day ,5 days a week routine or it differs?

4. Do you have to undergo any training before commencing the job? How long is the training, does one have to pay for it from his or her personal funds or is it considered as a part of the job activity

5. I need to sit the C1 exam. I currently possess a B2, except for my writing skills which is mundane. My Comprehension, Spoken and vocabulary are fine. Sitting the C1 is almost a 60 day preparation period so wanted to know if it makes economical sense.

6. Is there a high Attrition rate, or the American standard of Hire and Fire policy.

7. Any advice, suggestions or experiences are welcome .

Thank you for your time and patience, looking forward to your response.

If you want to work as a teacher at a regular german school, you have to be able to not only speak and read on a C1- C2 level, but you also have to write on a C1- C2 level. Writing is a necessary part of the job.

Lateral entrants are normally full time employees which means you do have about 42-43 hours work per week in theory with 30 days of vacation per year. As school vacations last longer than 30 days, you have to work more hours in school weeks. Especially during the lateral entry, you will probably work rather 60 hour per school week plus a lot of extra hours for preparation, correting tests, etc. in school vacations.

„How difficult is the job?“ Quite difficult, as you will be a newbie in the country aswell as in the german school and work system. Take your time therefore to make sure your german writing skills are at a C1-level too. You will need them every day at work.
